New Members Taken by INCA

Three new members have been accepted on the International Advisory Committee of the New Orleans-based International Headquarters of the Information Council of the Americas (INCA), according to Dr. Alton Ochsner, president.

They are Dr. Lev. E. Dobriansky, national chairman of the Captive Nations Committee, Washington, D.C., and author of the best seller "U.S. and the Soviet Myth;" Dr. George E. Armstrong, national chairman of the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China and former Surgeon-General of the U.S. Army from 1951-55; and Dr. Bettis A. Garside, executive director of the Associated Board for Christian Colleges in China.
